

Mental Health Support

You are not alone!

The COVID-19 pandemic is a very difficult time for many of us. It is normal to feel stressed and worried. Please know that there is help available in our community.

Help is available

If you or someone you know is having a hard time coping, please reach out for help.

Visit counsellingconnect.org to talk to a counsellor by phone or video.

This is a free service for all ages and you can get help for many different problems. You can get an appointment the same day or the next day.

Services are also offered specifically for First Nations, Inuit, and Metis people.

You can also call The Walk-in Counselling Clinic at 613-755-2277 or go to walkincounselling.com. They have services in English, French, Arabic, Spanish, Somali, Cantonese and Mandarin at different locations.

If you need to talk to someone right now, these services are here for you 24 hours a day, every day of the week.

COVID-19 and Mental Health

COVID-19 can be very stressful for you and your family.

There are things you can do to help you and your family get through this

- focus on the things that helped you cope with stress in the past
- limit the time you spend listening to the news
- keep busy with things you enjoy
- avoid using alcohol and other drugs to cope
- practice mindfulness and meditation
- stay connected with people you care about by phone or internet
- connect with your spiritual community and practice your religion but stay 2 meters apart and wear a mask if inside a temple, church, mosque, synagogue or place of worship

Watch for signs of stress in your child or teen

- changes in their mood or behavior, like sadness or having more outbursts
- changes in their appetite or sleep pattern
- headaches or stomach-aches.

How to help your child

- listen and recognize their feelings
- give them the right information for their age
- keep a regular routine for eating and sleep
- limit the time they are on their devices or watching TV
- do fun activities with them
- encourage them to get outside for exercise
